

Name: Nathaniel Umukoro

Date of Birth: 1977

Institutional Affiliation: Edo University, Nigeria.

Contact Information: numukoro@yahoo.co.uk

Noted for: Application of principles of thermodynamics to security and strategic studies

Nathaniel Umukoro is Senior Lecturer and Ag. Head of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration, Edo University Iyamho, Nigeria. He obtained his Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Benin before proceeding to the University of Ibadan where he obtained Master of Science, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees. During his doctoral programme, he was a fellow of the Next Generation Social Sciences in Africa Programme of the Social Science Research Council, New York, U.S.A. He is also an alumnus of Brown International Advanced Research Institute, Brown University, USA and the Georg Arnhold Programme on Education for Sustainable Peace of Georg Eckert Institute, Germany. In addition to his postgraduate studies, he received training in mixed-method research from the Partnership for African Social and Governance Research, Nairobi, Kenya, in collaboration with the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, United Kingdom. In 2010 he was an exchange scholar to the United States. He has received grants for academic purposes from foreign institutions and universities such as United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA), Carnegie Corporation of New York, United States Population Reference Bureau, African Development Bank (ADB), UNESCO- Merck, Switzerland, Mapungubwe Institute for Strategic Reflection, South Africa, International Network for Genocide Scholars, African Studies Association of the United Kingdom, University of Paris, University of Ghana and Brown University, USA. Dr. Umukoro has over 40 publications and has presented papers in 21 international conferences and workshops organized in countries such as United States of America, France, Germany, Switzerland, Ethiopia, Zambia, Tanzania, Kenya and Ghana.